MAY DAY, FOREVER RED AGAIN!

By frh

today is red because of historical necessity because blood is a collection of memories and the cries of defiance and death echoing through the halls of history today is red because the martyrs of our class spilled their blood onto the cobble-stone streets of chicago, and it cannot be covered up, not with the grey, brittle stones of revisionism or the scum and dirt of the other decrepit enemies of our class our class, the proletariat, that has generated great heroes and leaders, combatants, militants and cadres, a bravery so unmatched that we dare to challenge death itself, “to snatch the laurels of victory from the clutches of death” today is red and retaken from the imperialist snakes who have turned a day of revolution into a day of police-permitted parades, as the proletariat is exploited, raped, evicted, killed

today is red because of the rays that stretch across the world, generated by our red sun, setting ablaze all-round the world, the spark reignited in the ayacucho heart of peru

what a privilege it is to be condemned!

what a privilege it is that we have shed our names, our faces, our petty distractions!

what a privilege it is that we have adopted the democratic-centralist discipline of the Party in embryo, that grows every day stronger, nurtured from the attacks by our rabid enemies who lash out senselessly desperately, like a petulant child what a privilege that we have marked the great slogan onto our hearts, “¡dar la vida por el Partido y la revolución!”

“to give our life to the Party and the revolution!”

we are like the children of the red sun, inheritors of the initiators of the new great wave of world proletarian revolution, inheritors of the defenders of the people and the great proletariat, and it grows red like freshly-forged steel, like fallen ambers upon the plains and in the jungles, like the heights of the flames that consume the old world, purifying the ground for the new world to be born, and our class will celebrate with bombs and fireworks and cheers, that we have retaken everything after having nothing, and the old, dying state, will be set ablaze around us, warming us with the tall flames of great hammers and sickles this is our day, may day, forever red again permanent with guaranteed victory, so raise up your red flags, raise up your arms and your fists this is how we will celebrate the new world, the new power, and communism long live may day!

long live international workers' day!

long live Marxism-Leninism-Maoism, principally Maoism!
